

AUSTRALIAN JOURNAL OF MIDWIFERY

The Australian Journal of Midwifery, published quarterly, is the official publication of the Australian College of Midwives Incorporated (ACMI).

Aim and Scope

The Australian Journal of Midwifery is the peak scholarly and research journal for midwives in Australia. It provides an opportunity for midwives to share their ideas and their research to promote evidence based midwifery practice and woman - centred care. The journal provides a national and international forum for the exchange of midwifery ideas, practice and research. It is a vehicle for professional development and on-going education and is a publication of the Australian College of Midwives Incorporated.

The Australian Journal of Midwifery is a refereed journal and articles are subject to blind review. Articles contained in this journal are the opinions of the authors, and not necessarily those of the Editor, Editorial Board or the ACMI.
